

Location
 Asia is the world's largest continent and is traditionally defined as part of the landmass of Eurasia—with the western portion of Eurasia occupied by Europe.

Population
 Most populous continent, approximately 4 billion people (60% of the world's current human population)

Economy
 Asia has the second largest nominal GDP of all continents, after Europe, but the largest when measured in PPP.
 GDP- Gross Domestic Product
 PPP- Purchasing Power Parity

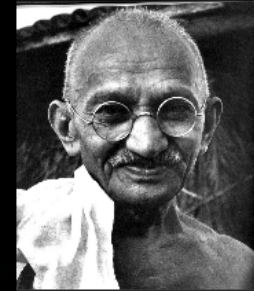

Languages
 Asia is home to several language families and many language isolates. Most Asian countries have more than one language that is native spoken.

- China
- Japan
- India
- Vietnam
- Sanskrit

Asia is 17,139,445 square miles

Asian Unit

Location
 Asia is the world's largest continent and is traditionally defined as part of the landmass of Eurasia—with the western portion of Eurasia occupied by Europe.

Population
 Most populous continent, approximately 4 billion people (60% of the world's current human population)

Economy
 Asia has the second largest nominal GDP of all continents, after Europe, but the largest when measured in PPP.
 GDP- Gross Domestic Product
 PPP- Purchasing Power Parity

Languages
 Asia is home to several language families and many language isolates. Most Asian countries have more than one language that is native spoken.

- China
- Japan
- India
- Vietnam
- Sanskrit

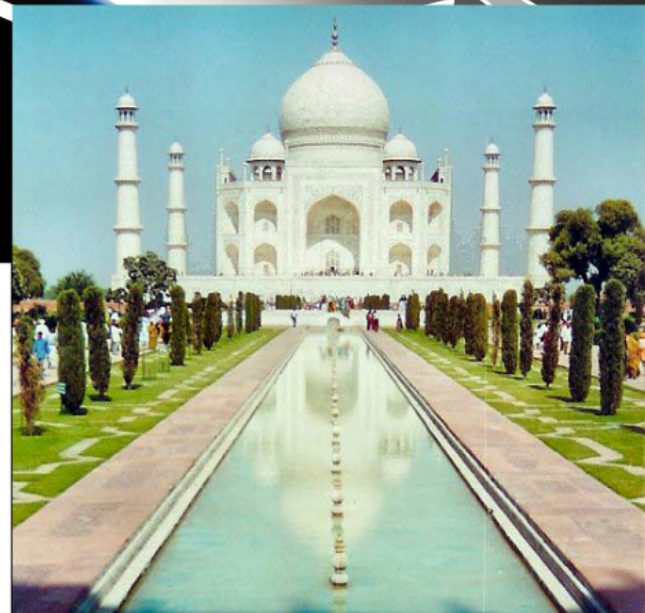

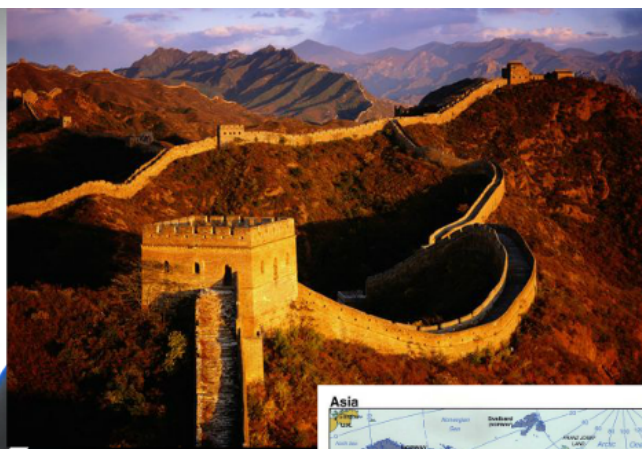

Asia is 17,139,445 square miles

Asian Unit

people current

of Eurasia
occupied by Euro

Population

Most populous continent,
approximately 4 billion people (60% of the world's current human population)

Economy

Asia has the second largest nominal GDP of all continents, after Europe, but the largest when measured in PPP.

GDP- Gross Domestic Product
PPP- Purchasing Power Parity

The largest economies in Asia are China, Japan, India, South Korea and Indonesia

The largest economies
in Asia are China, Japan, India, South Korea and Indonesia

Location

Asia is the world's largest continent and is traditionally defined as part of the landmass of Eurasia—with the western portion of Eurasia occupied by Europe.

Languages

Asia is home to several language families and many language isolates. Most Asian countries have more than one language that is native spoken.

China

Japan

India

Vietnam

Sanskrit

Asia is 17,139,445
square miles

